

As Regional Director, Northeast, Shameek Robinson oversees programs across the northeast United States while developing scalable approaches for effective partnerships with local and national programs at College Advising Corps.

Shameek has over two decades of experience working in education across the K-16 pipeline in public and non-profit settings. Most recently, he has worked for the College Board partnering with districts, schools, community-based organizations and post-secondary institutions to connect students to post-secondary success and opportunity. Shameek's career in education, college and career readiness has spanned multiple organizations such as the College Board, the National College Access Network (NCAN), the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth (CTY) and Teach for America (TFA), to name a few. He is a current member of the National Association of College Admissions Counseling (NACAC) and its New York affiliate (NYSACAC), and NCAN. Shameek has previously served on the boards of Young Education Professionals, NYC (YEP-NYC) and College Access Consortium of New York (CACNY) – he currently serves on the board of NYSACAC and current President of the Association of Black Educators of New York (ABENY).

Shameek holds a bachelor's degree in Biology from Rutgers University and an M.S.Ed. in Education Studies with concentrations on School Family and Community Collaboration and Education Administration from the Johns Hopkins University School of Education. In his spare time, he records the Black In Progress podcast and enjoys traveling and trainspotting.