

Biography - David LaNore

David LaNore is the Member Services Manager for the National College Attainment Network (NCAN). In this role David provides NCAN members with support to help close equity gaps in postsecondary education by providing professional development training, programming resources, and pertinent content that increases knowledge sharing about current issues and trends in college access and degree attainment.

Before joining NCAN, David worked with multiple college access programs throughout Michigan and in Baltimore, MD. Recognizing the unique challenges faced by students both in urban and rural areas, David has passionately championed their cause. Working closely with local schools, community organizations, business leaders, elected officials, and families to establish support networks and sustainable pathways to higher education.

David LaNore's two decades of experience, combined with his passion for educational equity, has equipped him with a deep understanding of the complex dynamics involved in college attainment. He consistently navigates the intricacies of educational systems to engage diverse stakeholders and drive positive change and advocates for every educator to do the same. David is proud to support the work of expanding educational opportunities for all students, particularly those in underserved communities.
